TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION.
Single copy, one year in advance, $2 50
Clubs of seven, 15 00

It is intended to make the SHELBY SENTINEL a first-class Family Newspaper, independent of sect or party, devoted to General News, Literature, and Morality. Approaching the necessity for a Superior Newspaper in this part of Kentucky, we will bend every energy to make the SHELBY SENTINEL acceptable to all classes. To those who have a distaste for partisan strife, our paper will be a welcome guest. In the angry mutterings of discord, we will be hushed in the endeavor to heal the frightful wounds, which years of war have caused. To sustain our paper, we naturally expect the assistance and co-operation of the people of Shelby. While the local interests of this section will not be neglected, we will aim to advance the general prosperity of the State.

The general interests and welfare of the county can in no better way be advanced than through the medium of a newspaper. Devoting our attention to all topics of the day, we will freely and independently discuss them. To prevent any misapprehension as to the position which the SHELBY SENTINEL will occupy, we will state that our approval and support will be given to a mild and conciliatory policy, condemning all radical, revolutionary or unjust measures. Believing that this is the only course which will result in permanent prosperity to the country and that those views are such as the people of Kentucky naturally and heartily endorse, we shall uphold and defend them at all times. Firm in the opinion that we can make our paper acceptable, we ask a liberal patronage.

SHADOWS.

BY JENNIE FOREST.

When the eventide is creeping
Round the bright emparfled West,
And the stars their vigils keeping,
O'er the "early one to rest."
When the whippoorwill is trilling, Plaintively his evening song;
And the beauty of its cadence,
Through the twilight floats along.

Then around my heart there lingers
Memories of an image fair, Stealing o'er my spirit's vision,
Mingling with my evening prayer;
And methinks I see the moonbeams, Falling on a lonely tomb;
Where the myrtle and the daisies
In their early beauty bloom.

One by one the years have glided,
With their weary feet away;
Since our first love-farewells were spoken,
On that rose-crowned eve in May;
One by one the lengthening shadows,
O'er my darkened pathway fell,
Since we left him softly sleeping
In that lonely cypress dell.

Like the shadows of the pine trees,
Resting on the silvery streams,
Darkness creeps into my spirit,
Crushing bright and cherished dreams.
Oh, ye shadows! lingering shadows,
My weary heart must ever weep, Yet we know our absent loved one
"Sleepeth well," the dreamless sleep.

From the Crescent Monthly.

PHILIP: MY SON.

I saw my boy growing rapidly into manhood with the growth of his love. It was the first love of a strong and passionate nature, and a young man's first love so seldom has root in anything deeper than mere physical beauty. Margaret Thorpe was a woman to infatuate enthusiastic nature, especially of boys or very young men.
There was a peculiar fascination about her rare loveliness—her manner, half-childlike, and half-dignified—her winning voice, and willowy, graceful figure.
At times I believed her utterly unconscious of Philip's sentiments toward her, she seemed to meet his impulsive demonstrations so calmly, and look almost with surprise at any sudden outburst of earnestness; but anon this changed, and when I saw her sitting with down-cast eye and drooping lash under the gaze which he fixed upon her, listening with that peculiar manner she knew so well to assume, and replying in a voice so tenderly cadenced, lifting her violet eyes to his, then I knew she felt and believed it. No woman could doubt such evidence.

Philip seemed to grow taller and grander. There was a pride in his bearing; the splendid Antinous-like head, the flashing eye, the quivering, finely cut nostril, the mouth and chin shaped like a woman's in its delicate curves—all were touched with new fire, undying, immortal. As he dismounted from his horse at the gate and walked up the garden path with his stately step, I heard Margaret, who was watching him from the window, murmur to herself: "Philip, my king!" Long years after I heard that same voice, broken by tears, chant an exquisite, home-lyric, bearing a similar burden of love and pride, as she folded a tiny white-robed Philip in her arms.

They went out often together, sometimes on horseback, sometimes walking. On these latter excursions Margaret frequently carried a little basket on her arm filled with sand-wiches, and cake, and a bottle of home-made wine; and Philip would take a fishing rod, while out of the breast-pocket of his coat would peer the azure binding of Tennyson, the inevitable and invariable companion on all occasions, though I heard Philip declare laughingly he could not comprehend one word from preface to finis of the volume, except the poem quoted daily to the praise of his idol, "Margaret." What all this tended to, I could not tell. I did not even know if Philip had declared his affection. Like one in a dream, I was content for all things to go on as they had done, and dreaded a change; but it came at last.

Late one evening I was half dozing in my arm-chair by the sitting-room window.
The day had been intensely warm, and the entire household appeared overpowered by some influence in the atmosphere. Philip had ridden off before the sunset. I saw him dashing down the avenue like one mad, and presently Margaret went up stairs with her light step, humming in a mocking voice, it seemed to me, a foolish little French chanson. I had left the two very good friends in the verandah after dinner, Philip smoking and playing with Margaret's ball of gold thread, while she sat de-murely netting on that wonderful piece of work, half-smoking cap, half-turban; but somehow, these latter days, there was a provoking air about Margaret that seemed at times to goad Philip almost to desperation. I knew now she had been teasing him again—my poor boy, who had never been denied the smallest boon in all his short, bright life.

From where I sat, I could see Margaret's white dress gleaming between the rose vines as she sat on the steps of the piazza, half-hid from view by thick clusters of multiflora, and drooping sprays of clematis.

She had a manuscript-book in her hand—this very one that lies beside me now—of satin vellum, richly embossed; while her chin rested in the palm of the other, and her head was bowed in deep reverie. There was a step on the gravel, and I heard her say, without raising her head: "Come here, Philip! I have something to read to you—" and then went on, in a low, steady monotone peculiarly impressive in its exquisite modulation—flowing on like the sound of water far off:

"Have you sent her all her letters? Have you given her back her ring?
Have you striven to forget the songs you loved to hear her sing?
Have you cursed the day you met her first—thanked God that you were free?
And in your inmost heart as you thought: "She never was dear to me!"
You have cast her off; your pride is touched; you fancy that all is done—
That you, the world is bright again, and bravely shines the sun!
You have washed your hands of passion—you have whistled her down the wind—Ah, Tom, old friend, this goes before—the sharpest belohn of love and grief—the passion you have foreworn—
Yes, the sharpest is yet to come, for Love is a plant that never dies,
Its roots are deep as the earth itself—its branches wide as the skies;
And whenever once it has taken hold, it flourishes evermore;
Blossoming still, and bearing its beautiful fruit with the bitter core.

You have learned this, Tom, hereafter, when anger has cooled, and you Have time for retrospection, you will find my words are true;
You will sit and gaze in your fire alone, and fancy that you can see
Her face with its classic oval—her ringlets fluttering free,
Her hazel eyes wide open, and her sweet red lips aspart,
As she used to look in the golden days, when you dreamed she had a heart: Whatever you do—wherever you turn, you will see that glorious face Coming with shadowy beauty to haunt all time and space!
Those songs she sang so sweetly, will sing themselves in your brain
Till your life seems set to their rhythm, and your thoughts to their refrain—Their old, old burden of love and grief—the passion
you have foreworn—
I tell you, Tom, it is not thrown off so well as you think this moment!

But the worst, perhaps the worst of all will be when the day has flown,
When darkness favors reflection, and your comrades leave you alone,
You will try to sleep, but the memories of unforget-ten years
Will come with a storm of wild regrets, mayhap with a storm of tears—
Each look, each word each playful tone, each playful little caress,
The earnest look in her hazel eyes, the rustling of her dress,
The delicate touch of her ungloved hand that woke such an exquisite thrill—
The flowers she gave the night of the ball, I think you you treasure them still—
All these will come till you slumber, worn out by sheer despair,
And then you will hear vague echoes of song on the Vague echoes rising and falling of the voice you know so well,
Like the songs that were sung by the Lurley maid, sweet with a deadly spell!

She stopped, and it seemed like the breaking of a dream. Philip sat at her feet; I could not see his face, but I heard his quick breath come and go, as if he panted for relief.

"Margaret!" he exclaimed in a hoarse voice, "don't torture me?" Torture you, Philip?"
"Yes, you know you do! Margaret, you have won me with your syren songs, and now you wreck me without a shadow of remorse or feeling!"

"It is not my fault that you love me; I never encouraged you."
"Not your fault!" exclaimed Philip, in that passionate, uncontrollable manner which he so often used of late. "Not your fault! Did you not look up into my face with those beautiful eyes of yours and say plainly with them, again and again, that you accepted my love? Do you not flatter me with every cadence of your voice —every smile so deadly sweet, to believe that you knew, and requited it? And now you call me to your feet, and listen to those verses you knew would madden my very brain, and say it is not your fault that I love you! Oh, Margaret, Margaret!"

"Philip, you wrong me! Listen, for I will speak!"—He interrupted her with a gesture eloquent of despair.

"Don't, Margaret! I know you are going all over those cruel words again—about my being younger than you, and how I surprised you, and the utter absurdity—all those words mean nothing to me. I don't believe any of it! Just tell me now, once and forever—do you not love me at all—not at all?"

He leaned forward so eagerly and caught her hand. There was a brief silence; and I waited to hear Margaret Thorpe speak.
She only said, in a half-suppressed, breathless way, "I am engaged!"

I could not endure it. I rose from my seat and went out into the piazza, where the moon, lately risen, shed her clear, pure light over the two figures on the steps, and yet so false.

"Margaret Thorpe," I said, "may God deal with you as you have dealt with my son!"

Philip and I were alone. The old clock ticked drowsily in the motionless, noonday air; but no other sound broke the intense stillness.

"Is she gone mother?" Philip asked, raising his head from the arm of the sofa, as suddenly the tramp of horses and the rolling of wheels over the old bridge at the creek came distinctly upon the silence; and I heard a great sigh of relief, knowing that the fatal shadows of one selfish like form would not darken our door again.

Philip repeated his question. I only bowed my head, and asked him if he would have anything—a glass of iced water, or a cooled melon, or—

"Nothing—nothing, mamma! Just let me rest!" and he put down his head again, and sighed heavily.

Oh, was his mother's love nothing to him! He was all the world to me, yet I was powerless to comfort him. I knelt down beside the sofa and placed my hand on the shining ringlets, now so disheveled with restless tossing to and fro, and twined them softly round my fingers. "Philip, my boy, you have your mother still!"

He threw his arm around me, and, tho' the eagles eyes had lost their splendor, they beamed with tenderness.
"I have my mother still! Yes thank God! I have been a wayward, ungrateful boy, but I am strong now. Forgive me, mamma! Your Philip has not lost all his manhood; he will try to be a better son in future."

There was a tinge of bitterness in his voice, but he conquered it as he went on.
"I was blind, infatuated! There is no language strong enough to express how madly I have dreamed, and what the breaking of that dream has cost me. But it is past. Come what will, I shall be strong!"

He rose as he spoke—he expanded. I saw my Sampson break the cords of the enchanted and defy the Philistines. His locks were not shorn; he threw them back with a princely grace; and, as I looked upon his face, wearing that smile of conscious strength and unconquerable pride, I thought I heard Margaret Thorpe murmuring, "Philip, my King!"

But she was far away now!
From that day my boy was a man. In three short months he had lived years, and the gay, careless days, so briefly past, never returned again. He did not mope, nor lounge. Taking the present as a loan from Heaven, he went forward as a dependable debtor, to pay it with interest in Eternity.
Those summer days were never alluded to;
and, when some garrulous neighbor mentioned, as a piece of village gossip, that our beautiful guest, Miss Thorpe, was about to be married to her cousin, Frank Hastings, only a brief spasm contracted Philip's calm face, and he left the room hastily. In a few minutes he returned, but a palor, which did not wear off for several days. Neither of us ever spoke of it.

In the winter, my son went to spend the Christmas holidays with his father's relations, in Berkshire. He was loathe to leave me, we were so quiet and content together now; but I believed a short respite from plantation cares, and a glimpse of the world, would benefit him; and he returned looking happy, with even a dash of his old mischievous manner. I told him one day I thought fashionable life must be very congenial to his temperament; I would like him to go again soon to Berkshire.

"And so I will, mamma dear, and you shall go with me, for I want to show you the dearest little seventy-first cousin, and see how you would like her for a daughter-in-law."

It was a careless, laughing speech; he did not mean a word of it, and little Lucy Alston was not in all his thoughts. But, for all that, he went again the following Christmas, and I went with him. The third Christmas after found little Lucy my daughter-in-law.

She was a gentle creature, with dark brown eyes, full of kindness, and truth, and sincerity. Philip was very proud of his wife; and when I saw him take the tiny figure, scarcely reaching to his elbow, and lift her up as a mere plaything, I thanked God in my heart of hearts that He had over-ruled all these seemingly unhappy events for the welfare of him who was the apple of my eye—the only hope of my declining years.

It was beautiful to see the tender care which Philip bestowed upon the wife—Though much his junior—a mere child in appearance—she had a thoughtful earnestness which dignified every word and action; and insensibly she twined herself around the pillar of our household, at once adorning and supporting it.

Five years rolled by, with few incidents to mark changing seasons, and it seemed scarcely so many months, since Philip had brought to our home her whom he fondly called his "wee wifie," when I placed in the arms of the delighted father what we had all so longed and prayed for, as little babe—his first-born. The light of boy-hood shone in his wondering eyes as he lifted the tiny pink fingers of the stranger and caressed them with inexpressible gentleness. Old Dinah stood by, very much elated by her newly-acquired dignity of head nurse. She smoothed her apron, and looked from Philip's glowing face to the half-visible bit of morality in his arms, and whispered audibly:

"Ought to call 'um Thorpe Alston—dat's ole fam'ly name."

It was the first time we had heard the fatal sound in many years, and Philip started.
He looked fiercely at the loquacious old nurse for a moment, and then gave the babe into my arms, and asked quietly if he might see Lucy.

LOCK JAW.—We have observed in the papers lately, notices of several deaths by this disease—one of them in this neighborhood. We have published several times a certain preventative and remedy in the application of beef's gall to the wound. Besides its anti-spasmodic properties, the gall will draw from the wound any particles of wood, glass iron, or any other substances that may cause irritation, when other applications have failed to do so.—Exchange.

A Mother's Death—Beautiful

Embalming of Grief.

"Unfortunate is that man," says Jean Paul, "whose mother has not made all other mothers venerable," and here we give an eloquent and touching lament for a departed mother that must have come from some orphaned heart. Few who have lost their "first and dearest friend" can read this, we believe, with unmoistened eyes:

Death comes an unsought guest to every board, and at his spectral bidding some beloved one, goes forth to his mysterious home.

Time and philosophy may teach resignation unto hearts made desolate by his coming; but they can never fill the vacancy therein, when she that was our mother no longer casts a halo about our darkened hearth.

A mother's place—so loved, so worshiped—once empty, must be forever so. A breast once panged by a mother's death, no medicine can reach with healing.

The bitterest truth in life is that we learn in agony, and bathe with tears, when our first, our last, perchance our only friend, hath bled away in the anxious arms of Mercy's purest angels.

The heavy head then falls upon the crushed bosom, and hope and Heaven seem to have abandoned us indeed.

The dark, wild storm gathers about our future, and the baleful lightning depicts our desolation.

Up into the troubled sky we gaze for a sign of approaching calm and only the angry thunder answers to our unspoken prayers.

Years pass, wrestling with our passions and expectations, and bending many lifeless to the ground; and yet the love of her, our sainted mother, dwelleth in our heart, firm and faithful as of yore; and our thoughts, in silence and solitude, still cluster about her image, enshrined in the holiest sanctuary of our soul.

No mind however sacred, no heart however hardened, can forget the gentle being whose sufferings begot his life.

The Shelby Railroad.

The General Council of the city of Louisville have finally passed the ordinance for the benefit of the Shelby Railroad Company. We have heretofore explained to our readers that by this ordinance the mayor is directed to subscribe $100,000 to the capital stock of the company when they shall show that their assets are sufficient with that subscription to complete the road. This is a condition precedent to which no one could object; for if the city invests her money in the road, it is but reasonable that she should have a positive assurance that the road will be made. The ordinance was amended in the Board of Aldermen. The amendment in substance is to this effect, that the old stockholders should agree to accept $77,000 in stock for the work heretofore done on the road. This amount we learn was about the original cost of the grading &c. Before this ordinance can be of any value to the company it will therefore be necessary for that class of stockholders to relinquish a portion of their stock; we are informed about twenty-five per cent. Of course no stockholder will hesitate to comply with this amendment, for the stock left in his hands will be worth ten times as much as the whole now is. In fact his stock is now worth nothing at all, and never will be if this subscription is not made by the city of Louisville, but as soon as the road is put under contract it will probably be worth fifty per cent. Of course the ordinance must be ratified by a vote of the people. It will be submitted at the first election. There is no doubt whatever of the result before the people. They have never yet refused to vote any tax that contributed to the extension of railroads, and to the prosperity of the city. We learn that there is still a deficiency of $100,000 to be raised in this county. What an insignificant sum to insure to Shelby County a direct railroad from the county seat to the best market in the State. It would be a disgrace to the county if her citizens should allow this opportunity to complete this very important enterprise to escape them. We learn that the Board of Directors will probably consider the subscription of the city as a fixed fact and will proceed at an early day to call upon the people of the county to make the additional subscription necessary to complete the road.

A GOOD NUMBER.—The Phrenological Journal for August contains portraits of Benj. Franklin, Lewis Cass, C. F. Brydges, Brunnell, Mrs. Parkhurst, etc., with articles on Responsibility; Sowing and Reaping; The Servant Question; Getting Married; Writing; The Philosophy of Phonography; How to Live; Air and Sunlight; Summer, and its Lessons; Over-Eating; Head and Body; Man-Monkeys; Insanity, and Religious Excitements; Physiology, Time, Tune, Veneration, Double Chins, Large ears, etc. 20 cents, or $2 a year. FRANK LESLIE.—From this popular publisher we have received the following periodicals:

FRANK LESLIE'S ILLUSTRATED NEWS-PAPER. Published Weekly—Price 10 cents, or $4 a year.

FRANK LESLIE'S CHIMNEY CORNER. Published Weekly—Price 10 cents, or $4 a year.

FRANK LESLIE'S LADY'S MAGAZINE. Published Monthly—Price $3 50, yearly.

As a publisher of periodicals, Frank Leslie has achieved great success. He is publisher of more magazines and papers than any other man in the country. Those who desire to subscribe for any of the publications named, can do so at this office.

VOTE OF THE STATE.—So far as heard from, the majorities for Duvall sum up about as follows:

Louisville City	1,503
Jefferson County	800
Henry	500
Oldham	340
Simpson	450
Campbell	400
Hardin	400
Franklin	845
Scott	1,400
Mason	1,500
Logan	1,000

Dr. B. F. Slaughter, formerly of Shelbyville, Ky., has removed to Louisville and established an office on the northeast corner of Hancock and Jefferson streets. Dr. Slaughter is both a scholar and a gentleman, and is thoroughly devoted to his profession. He will soon command a fine practice.—Low Democrat.

We take pleasure in bearing testimony to the qualification of Dr. B. F. Slaughter. He is theoretically and practically acquainted with his profession and deserves success.

Robinson the circus rider, receives a salary of $24,000 per annum.—Exchange. The same amount is the aggregate salary for one year of fifty "circus riders."

PREMIUMS! PREMIUMS!

RICH AND RARE!

To increase the circulation of the Sentinel and at the same time reward those who aid us in this most worthy object, we offer a list of premiums which will be given without fail to the persons most successful in obtaining subscribers. Competition for these premiums is not confined to this county alone, but open to every reader of the Sentinel. Those who wish to compete for these premiums, can send the names of subscribers as fast as obtained and an accurate account will be kept of the same. Subscribers may be obtained for different post-offices.

1st. A large Family Bible—price, $12. This is one of Potter's Photograph Bibles. It contains, besides the Old and New Testament, the Apocrypha, Family Record, and a place for photographs, making it the most complete Family Bible ever offered to the public. This Bible can be seen at P. & S. H. Ellingwood's Drug and Jewelry Store. 2nd. A splendid Portrait of General R. E. Lee or Stonewall Jackson, or any other picture in the establishment valued at $5.50. The successful person can have choice of either of the pictures. They are on exhibition at B. B. Ross' Book and Drug Store. 3d. A fine gold headed cane. For a gentleman this will be a nice present. It can be seen at Hastings & Hollenbach's. 4th. The poetical works of Mrs. Hemans, Coleridge, and Campbell, 3 vols., in blue and gold. Value $4 50, at P. & S. H. Ellingwood's. 5th. This Premium is for our young friends and will be a nice juvenile book, worth $2, from B. B. Ross' Book Store. For the first premium offered herein, the list must not be under 50 names, and the award will be made the first of October. For the second, third and fourth premiums, the list must not be under twenty-five subscribers. Every citizen of Shelby County should be a subscriber to the Sentinel. This is our offer, and we will just add that it is a way in which a good work can be performed with good pay attached. We are constantly receiving names here and there, from this and adjoining counties. Some enterprising person can easily obtain the requisite number, and thus have an evidence of the Sentinel's liberality. We will send specimens of paper and circulars upon application. Let it be known, also, that the the Sentinel will be enlarged as soon as a sufficient number of subscribers are obtained. Subscribers obtained for these premiums will be at the regular rate of subscription—the money accompanying each name.

That persons not successful in getting large lists of subscribers may be rewarded for their trouble, we add to our lists two premiums, which we will give in addition to those already offered. The Orpheus C. Kerr Papers, Third Series. Enquire within, or 3700 Facts for the people. These are both very popular books; the list must not be less than ten names.

Louisville and Shelbyville United.

As elsewhere announced, the General Council of Louisville have passed the Ordinance subscribing stock in the Shelby Railroad Company. We are satisfied that the action of the Council will be ratified by the people. The city of Louisville rightly appreciate the advantages to be derived from the proposed road, and well know that the amount subscribed is small in comparison with the money that will be returned to the city when the road is in operation. The trade of all this section pouring into Louisville with the increased facilities of railroad communications will add very materially to the constantly increasing prosperity of our neighboring city. We see no reason why Louisville with proper enterprise, should not become one of the largest commercial cities in the Union. The trade of the South naturally tends to Louisville, and as southern resources are more fully developed and made available our commercial emporium will reap a rich harvest from that section. Not only increased prosperity of Louisville will result from the road, but upon its completion Shelbyville will present to the city merchants and others, the very desirable advantage of a village home. Possessing as our town does, all the inducements which first class schools and academies present, with unexcelled church privileges, the temptation to make Shelbyville a residence accessible to the city, will be irresistible. In behalf of our citizens we extend a cordial invitation to our Louisville friends to make Shelbyville their home, assuring them in all candor that no more desirable locality in the land can be found than this.

The U. S. Senate voted the salary of its members to $5,000, but the House refused by a vote of 125 to 3. The Senate insisted upon its amendment, and the House yielded, with a proviso, that the mileage should be reduced to twenty cents per mile. So the members will have for their whole term, $5,000 (instead of $3,000) per annum.

Telegraphic.

CINCINNATI, August 6.

The cholera still continues to increase in the city. The health officer's report at 6 o'clock this evening, shows twenty-nine deaths from the epidemic during the last twenty-four hours. The weather continues too cool for the season.

NEW YORK, August 6.

The cholera in this city had not seemingly abated for the twenty-four hours antecedent to 7 o'clock P. M. yesterday. Twenty-nine official cases and nine deaths were during that period reported in Brooklyn. Great difficulty was experienced in obtaining correct returns on Sunday, owing to the alleged laxity or mismanagement of the sanitary officials. Three deaths of previously reported cases had occurred on Governor's Island. On the other islands no additional cases were mentioned.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 6.

Reports to the Board of health up to noon to-day show 14 new cases of cholera, 3 of which were fatal. The reports embrace Saturday and Sunday. The number of deaths from cholera during the week ending Saturday was 47.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 6.

Some 20 cases of cholera are reported to the Board of Health since Saturday, mainly of persons from the South. Several deaths occurred. The general sanitary condition of the city is unusually good. No apprehensions are felt of the disease becoming epidemic.

NEW YORK, Aug. 6.

Twenty cases and four deaths by cholera in this city, and eight cases and one death in Brooklyn were reported up to noon to-day.

MADISON, IND., August 6.

The steamer Gen. Lytle blew up about eighteen miles below this city P. M.

The St. Charles, of the People's Line passed the Lytle lying at Westport. When near Bethlehem, the Lytle came up to the St. Charles, and in the attempt to pass her was blown up.

The boats were very near together when the accident occurred, not even ten feet apart. No one on the St. Charles was injured.

Capt. Godman, of the Lytle is dead. His remains are now lying at the residence of his brother-in-law, Col. S. B. Serring, in this city.

The Captain of the St. Charles says they were not racing, and exonerates Capt. Godman and the crew of the Lytle from all blame.

The Engineer of the Lytle, who is very a dily dead, says his boat was carrying but 155 pounds of steam when the accident occurred.

It is supposed that from 10 to 20 lives were lost. All the deck hands and fireman are lost. The passengers are marked missing who are supposed to be killed.

The Lytle, after the accident, took fire; but the flames were extinguished and the wreck towed ashore.

The killed and wounded were brought to this city, and are receiving the kindest attention from the citizens.

The Lytle is almost a total wreck. This sad accident has cast gloom and sorrow over our whole city.

Public Meeting.

SHELBYVILLE, KY., Aug. 7, 1866.

In pursuance to notice published in the Louisville Courier, a meeting of the citizens of Shelby county was held at the Court House, in Shelbyville, on the above date.

On motion, Col. F. Garnett was chosen Chairman, and W. A. Jones, Secretary. The Democratic and Conservatives of the 3rd Congressional District, having met in Convention, at Lebanon, on the 25th day of July, and appointed Hon. Aaron Harding and E. A. Graves delegates to the Philadelphia Convention, and this County not being represented in the Lebanon Convention; therefore,

Resolved, That we the Democrats and Conservatives of Shelby county, do heartily approve and endorse the action of said Convention, and do ratify their action as reflecting the wishes of the people of this county.

On motion, it was resolved, that the proceedings of this meeting be published in the SHELBY SENTINEL, and Louisville Courier. F. GARNETT, Chairman.

W. A. JONES, Secretary.

DON'T BE ALARMED.—We caution our city and country friends not to be alarmed about the reports of the prevalence of the cholera in this city as an epidemic. The list of mortality is large, it is true; but not immoderately so, when the extraordinary weather of the few past weeks is taken into consideration. The heated term or terms—for their have been more than one this season—may now be regarded as past, and an abatement in death will, no doubt, immediately ensue. Our advice is: Keep the person clean, cool and comfortable, and the mind placid. Do not indulge in unripe fruits or wilted vegetables. Partake sparingly or reject altogether deleterious drinks, which are hurtful at all times. Be careful of your diet. Above all, do not let a cholera panic seize you, for it is almost as bad as the scourge itself. By following this advice there need be but little apprehension of the prevalence of any seated or wide-spread epidemic in this city this season.—N. Y. Herald.

A lovely little girl, (daughter of a Norfolk editor), who was recently drowned, was overheard, on the night preceding the fatal catastrophe, talking to some of her little playmates, and saying: "If my Heavenly Father should send for me to night I would not be afraid to go to him."

THE AMERICAN FARMER.—The August number of this publication is replete with not only valuable articles to practical farmers, but to professional men, and is well fitted for the family circle. Worthington & Louis, Baltimore Md. Publishers.

Crab Orchard Springs.

CRAB ORCHARD, KY., August 4, 1866.

Mr. Editor:—A short account of the regime at this celebrated watering place may not be without interest to your readers. Your correspondent was induced to come here as a relief from the cares of every day life, leaving home scenes and forgetting for awhile that he had ever looked into a book or knew anything of business; and truly this is a place for relaxation from care. Our party, consisting of a physician and lady from Louisville, a clergyman, his lady and children, of the same place, and your humble servant, made the trip hither a delightfully agreeable one. The railroad, which has just been completed to this place, renders it easy of access, and the facilities for travel are now as good as to any other watering place in the State. We left Louisville at 7 o'clock A. M., and passing through the thriving little towns of Lebanon and Stanford reached the "Springs Hotel" at 2 1/2 P. M. We found the hotel very much crowded, but have succeeded in getting comfortable rooms. Here we find all classes of persons—the gay young man seeking pleasure; the blushing, bright-eyed maiden, whose mission at Crab Orchard is to be wooed and also won, and the aged and infirm of both sexes, from all parts of the land, who have come here searching in these mineral waters for that Eldorado for which the aged are so prone to hope, and of which Edgar Poe so gracefully makes them forever despair. We have spent a large part of our time, so far, in making acquaintances among these numerous guests. The afternoon is pleasantly spent in visiting the various springs, surveying the spacious and beautiful grounds, and the evening in the ball-room and parlors; and it is here that fair maidens, ever-watchful, alabaster-like in the arts of cupid, give full play to facetiousness and fascination among those of the gentler sex, at present delighting us with their presence and smiles. We may mention Mrs. Dr. C—, of Alabama, and her charming sister, Miss Kate C—, of Louisville, who moves with the facile grace of one of Circe's daughters. She differs from those unfortunate maidens of classic memory in this one thing: that she is always selling us into a fruitless captivity, never for a moment allowing that she herself be made captive. Miss Alice B—, of Louisville, is continually reminding us, by her dignified manners and chaste conversation, that the difference and distinction between the loveliness of a pure woman and the purity of angels is imperceptibly discriminative. Miss L. F. O—, of Georgetown, who is, by the way, well known in your county, seems in her element when she is "charming never so wisely," and building hearthcombs from the very pliable material of susceptible hearts. Clay in the potter's hands has no volition. With her all of us are susceptible. Mrs. Dr. M—, of Louisville, graceful, highly educated, and elegant, is the admirer of all she meets; as pure and lovely as the blush of the morning, and as beautiful as an infant's dream. She needs but to be known to be loved. The finger of the Almighty has fashioned few such women as she, and when with her, we are apt to believe that Nature, if she has not "starved all others," has been strangely partial in the distribution of her charms. Rev. Mr. McElroy, of Louisville, who has figured of late in the Police Court of that city, is here; also, Rev. Mr. Rutherford, of Mississippi. We heard sermons from both of these gentlemen yesterday. The latter seems to be quite young, and his sermon certainly evinced more of the scholar and the logician than is usually found in so young a man. If he will continue to apply himself in the future as he has evidently done in the past, we predict for him a position of eminence in his church. Col. J. K. Huey, late of the Confederate army, is among the distinguished guests. He was formerly a member of the Kentucky Senate, and is now wearing his honors moderately and doing business in the Crescent city. His friends in Shelby will not be surprised to hear that he is the same courteous gentleman as formerly, and the ladies here will never want for gallantry and attention while Col. Huey is a guest at CRAB ORCHARD.

Shelby County, August 3d.

Mr. Editor:—I am quite sure you like to hear from the young folks once in awhile, and the many readers of your paper do not object, so I see no reason why I should not write you something about the Grand Pic Nic, which came off on Wednesday last, in Mrs. Johnston's woods. The weather was fine, the grounds wisely chosen, beneath wide spreading oaks, whose shades were truly delightful, since old Sol was smiling rather brilliantly on us. "Phaah" and his host" discoursed good music, while quite a number of beautiful ladies with gallant partners "tipped upon the light fantastic toe." The committee of arrangements as well as invitation were polite, attentive and kind. Mr. J. McG— and G. W. M—, were observed particularly, and their gentlemanly bearing was in strict accordance with their reputation. After dancing an hour or two, we marched off to dinner. You should have seen that table. It actually groaned beneath its weight of the good things of this world. Indeed if you had been absent a year, and had accidentally dropped from the clouds as it were at that table, you would have said, "I must be in Shelby again!" I was reminded of old times, for so many friends who have not been with us in our scenes of gaiety for several years, were there, gay and happy. As they deserved to be, and as brave General Stuart was wont to say, "Long may they stay!"

Amongst them was Mr. J. F. D—. He was not electioneering, but the ladies would like to vote for him. There were very few strangers on the grounds, but confidentially, Mr. Editor, there was one in the fun that positively ought to have been arrested. He was an accomplished rogue. He was stealing scores of those poor girls hearts away, and never giving any of his in return. Notwithstanding this, all went "as happy as a marriage bell," and I am sorry you were not an eye witness to our fun. But we were soon reminded that "Time and tide wait for no man," or woman either; and in the very midst of our fun, everybody felt it was time to go home. So our good-byes were spoken. Allow me, through the columns of your paper, to thank most kindly the "gettersup" of this nice affair, and in doing so, I speak for every one that attended. LOOKERON.

THE Seventh Session of this Institution opens the Third Monday in August, in order to offer to pupils an opportunity for a healthy development of their Moral, Mental and Physical faculties upon moderate terms. This Institution has been located in the country. For particulars apply to B. S. NEWLAND, Shelbyville.
Aug 8-1m.

PUBLIC SALE.

I WILL sell, publicly, to the highest bidder, on the premises, the 3d day of September, at 10 o'clock A. M., if not sold previously before the farm of Mrs. Thurston, deceased, situated in Shelby county, Ky., 3 miles from Clayville, and 2 miles south of the Louisville and Frankfort pike. It contains 335 acres of fine land, with a high state of cultivation, all fencing having been lately repaired; a comfortable brick house of seven rooms, a good barn and stable, and all necessary out-buildings, several never-failing springs and an excellent well in the yard. There is also a splendid pond in the place of never-failing water. Its watering facilities render it one of the best stock farms in the country. I will also sell a tract of good, timbered land of over a hundred acres, situated 1 mile from the Local Items.

A CUTTING AFFAIR.—We regret to learn that at the public speaking near Clayville last Saturday, a difficulty arose between Mr. T. Stewart and Mr. Jacob Caplinger, both of this county, in which Mr. C. was considerably cut up.

DEATH OF DR. RALSTON.—That Dr. T. N. Ralston has lost his life upon the ill-fated General Lytle, we have much reason to fear. Dr. Ralston's name appears as one of the missing with the statement that the missing are supposed to be killed. While we hope for the best, we fear that the deplorable news is too true.

OUR TOWN.—The Teachers convention is being held in town this week, and quite a number of distinguished teachers are in attendance. The meeting of the Louisville Presbytery at this place, also brings in our midst several eminent ministers. Revs. Stuart Robinson, and S. R. Wilson among the number. Dr. R. preached at the Presbyterian Church last evening.

WAVERTY MAGAZINE.—We utter no fulsome, paid-for flattery, when we say that the Waverly far excels in literary merit, the various light literature emanations of the Eastern press. The Waverly is edited with care, and has some very able contributors. It is far superior to any periodical of its class, that we have seen. Moses A. Dow, Boston, Publisher.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.—The following is a list of new advertisements; Dental Card of Dr. Yates, Louisville. Notice of Crosby, Layson & Co. Farm for sale by Wm. Ballard. Prospectus of New York Tribune. Male Strayed. Shelby Gymnasium, by Professor B. S. Newland Jr. Booths for Rent. Letter list. Farm for Sale by S. P. Middleton. Notice from Town Marshal. Coal for Sale by H. C. Petry.

The Schools of Shelbyville. Within the past few weeks catalogues and circulars have been issued from this office for various schools and academies in our midst, showing their prosperous condition, and setting forth the advantages which they each possess. We assert in no boastful spirit, but without fear of contradiction, that no town or village in the western country, is more highly favored with educational advantages, than Shelbyville, which is indeed a western Athens. We are not crowded with schools which are feebly supported, or which have a frail existence, but success, real and genuine success has been attained by them. Science Hill Female Academy the oldest Protestant institution in the valley of the Mississippi, having been in successful operation more than forty years, graduates annually large classes of young ladies from all parts of Kentucky, and southern and western states.

Kentucky Female College an institution owned principally by the Baptist of Shelby County, is liberally supported by that denomination, and has many friends who appreciate its advantages throughout the south-west.

Shelbyville Female College is ably presided over by Rev. D. T. Stuart, who for fifteen years, has had charge of the school, during which time it has enjoyed prosperous classes.

Shelbyville Male High School, needs no word of praise. The thorough instruction inculcated and the ability of Professors J. W. and V. W. Dodd have rendered it a decided success. Prosperity always attends this institution.

Shelby College will undergo very important changes; in consequence of which the next session will be deferred until October, when it will offer excellent advantages for the thorough instruction of young men.

The Primary Schools of Mrs. H. G. Allen and Miss Sue Fulton, as well as the District School, afford the little ones the opportunity for entering upon the field of knowledge, guided by kind and skilled instructors.

In addition to the schools in our midst, we would call attention to the Shelby Gymnasium in this county, of which Prof. B. S. Newland, Jr., is Principal. Those who prefer a country institution, with the advantages of able instructors, will find the Shelby Gymnasium very desirable.

Rev. H. F. Jorden, at Bagdad, has a flourishing school, where an English and classical education may be acquired. We have only enumerated those of which we have personal knowledge as to course of study and educational advantages. There are others in the county from which we have not heard. All together, we possess educational advantages of superior merit. While we appreciate the present prosperous condition of our schools, and remember with pride the success of the past, we confidently predict for Shelbyville a position of superior importance in the future.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.—We have not the space to notice editorially each new advertisement that appears this week, but call attention to all of them. Money is not only made by advertising, but it is made and saved by reading the advertising columns of a newspaper.

News Summary.

James C. Ayer, of Lowell, Mass., returns an income of $61,862. General Benjamin F. Butler, of the same place, $28,552.

An Englishman by the name of George Russell died in Memphis on Tuesday last from starvation.

The cholera is said to be prevailing as an epidemic in St. Louis, but little is said about it.

This city of Lowell has been sued by a child seventeen months old, to recover $5,000 damages for being run over by a city team. The suit is conducted by the father of the young litigant.

Two men and a boy, who were found guilty of murder and robbery three months ago, at Louisa, Ky., were taken out of jail by a mob, on Thursday, at that place, and hanged until they were dead.

The planting of cotton in Illinois is thus far a success. Accounts from that State say that the crops are promising. One planter has two hundred acres of cotton under cultivation.

The Massachusetts Insurance Company, of Springfield, Mass., voted on Tuesday to cease issuing policies, and will wind up its affairs, being led to this by the heavy losses recently sustained by the Portland fire.

A. T. Stewart's great branch dry-goods house at Savannah, Ga., will measure forty-two feet front by three hundred and ten feet deep, and have six stores. Its height will be ninety feet from the sidewalk, and it will be built of pure white marble.

DUEL WITH KNIVES.—Wm. Williams and Alex. England fought with knives at Clay's Ferry, near Richmond, Ky., a few days ago. England was killed. Howard Ogg shot and killed Hud. Jarmen near the same place on Wednesday.

Mr. Thornton and Mr. Singleton, both of Versailles, Ky., quarreled on Monday last, and shot each other. Singleton was shot in the side, the ball striking a rib and passing around the body. Thornton was shot in the thigh. Neither of the wounds are considered fatal.

A PEACE MESSAGE.—It is remarkable that the first message over the completed Atlantic cables of 1858 and 1866 were both peace messages. The former announced the close of a war then pending between England and France and China; the latter, the close of the European war.

On Wednesday last, Mr. G. W. Chambers, an old and highly respected citizen of Hancock county, Ky., was found dead in his tobacco field. There was a terrible gash on the top of his head, made, apparently, with a hoe. Near him a heavy hoe was found lying, the blade of which was covered with blood. The supposition is that he was murdered by negroes formerly owned by him. No arrests have been made.

A SEVERE JOKE ON A CLERGYMAN.—A clergyman was once sent for in the middle of the night by one of the ladies of his congregation. "Well, my good woman," said he, "so you are very ill, and require the consolation of religion? What can I do for you?" "No," replied the old lady, "I am only nervous and can't sleep." "How can I help that?" asked the parson. "Oh, sir, you always put me to sleep so nicely when I go to church, that I thought if you would only preach a little for me!" The parson "made tracks."

The Herald's City of Mexico correspondent, writing under date of July 10th, says the reorganization of Maximilian's army appears to be progressing finely. A great rush is being made on the American Consul by American citizens for their nationality papers, on account of the impending draft. No new military operations had taken place since the fall of Monterey, except the attack upon Jalapa, which was going on when the dispatch sailed. A New York company of capitalists had purchased the Floo railroad grant, and engineers are already at work.

The Mammoth Cave in Kentucky, is not without its story of love and romance. Some twenty years ago, a dashing Tennessee girl promised her mother that she would not marry a certain man "on the face of the earth"—said suitor being particularly objectionable to the old lady. So there was a quiet in the family for some time. But one pleasant day the gay girl and her lover ran away and went into the Cave, to a spot now called the "Bridal Chamber," and in the presence of a few witnesses, were there matrimonially united, about 325 feet below the "face of the earth."

The Rev. Mr. Gardiner, for thirty years a traveling minister of the Methodist Church in this State, was taken from the house at Georgetown, in which he was a guest, by some men in disguise, on Tuesday night of last week, and carried to Big Spring, and ducked in the water, until he, it is said, was nearly drowned. He had been preaching in the Negro Church at that place, which had given offence to the parties engaged in his ducking. He is the Superintendent of Colored Missions in the State. Out of the affair, a difficulty occurred a few days ago, between a Mr. Adams and a Mr. Johnson, in which the former was dangerously cut with a knife.
